

Old Hong Kong Sixty Years Ago

Life in Hong Kong sixty years ago was very different.

There were lots of differences between Hong Kong sixty years ago and nowadays, namely games, snacks and electrical appliances. For games, there were hopscotch and Chinese checkers but there weren't any TV games. Moreover, children played 'Black and White' in Hong Kong sixty years ago. Nowadays, nobody plays it.

Apart from games, I would like to talk about snacks. Sixty years ago, there were 'aeroplane' olives, iced gem biscuits and egg waffles. However, people usually have popping candies and sushi as their snacks these days.

Moreover, people use air-conditioners, computers and televisions now. These were not common, or could not be found sixty years ago. Everybody used fans and radios at that time. Compared with today, we seldom use radios daily.

I think I am very lucky because we have more advanced technologies nowadays and my life now is much more convenient than that sixty years ago.

4A_Tang Lok Ching,Ada