

Watching TV

Alan was at home. He watched cartoons in the living room after school because he thought they were interesting and funny.

Fifteen minutes later, Alan's sister, Amy came home. She saw Alan was watching cartoons so she said, 'Alan, I don't like watching cartoons because I think they are silly. May I watch sports programmes? You can try to watch it because I think they are exciting.'

'No, I watched them with father when I was little. I think they are boring. Maybe we can watch other programmes together?' Alan said. 'Yes, we can. Let's watch dramas or game shows.' Amy replied.

In the end, Alan agreed with Amy's suggestion to watch dramas and game shows. They were happy to eat ice-cream and watch TV together.
