

Watching TV

Alan was at home. He was watching a cartoon in the living room. He enjoyed it very much because it often made him laugh. He thought, 'This cartoon is so funny! I don't want to watch other programmes.'

Fifteen minutes later, Alan's sister Amy came home. She wanted to watch a sports programme because she thought it was exciting. She asked, 'Can we watch the sports programme?' Alan did not like sports programmes. He said to Amy, 'The sports programme is too silly and boring! I don't want to watch it. Maybe we can watch other programmes.' However, Alan and Amy could not come to an agreement.

In the end, Alan suggested, 'We can watch our favourite programmes at other times. Let's go to the park and play on the swings.' Amy said, 'What a good idea! Let's go.' Finally they went to the park and played happily.
